PERMISSION

As an international scientific organization, AOCS provides current and emerging information and disseminates research results in oils, fats, lipids, proteins, surfactants, and related materials through its meetings, publications, and web presence.

To support the dissemination of scientific knowledge, AOCS records and live streams selected presentations and sessions during its meetings. These recordings and live streams also provide scientists who are unable to attend meetings with a way to engage with the scientific community, and it allows presenters to expand the reach of their work to a larger audience. In addition, AOCS archives presentations in the AOCS Premium Content Library, an AOCS members benefit that provides members with a significant body of scientific knowledge.
